Nonviolent Resistance Revisited

Presenters: Malcolm Robinson & Catherine Sanders

With increased youth violence in schools and on our streets, social workers, psychologists, teachers & therapists are challenged to develop new approaches to angry & aggressive children. Utilising the ideas of Israeli psychologist, Haim Omer, Bower Place has extended the use of Nonviolent Resistance (NVR) to address the anger & aggression that masks the deeper needs of children.

The philosophy of NVR empowers parents, raises parent-teacher presence & works collaboratively with extended family, friends, community, school & professional systems to establish structures for non-violent leadership, responsibility & authority.

Haim Omer is Associate Professor of Psychology, University of Tel Aviv. He has developed NVR from principles of non violence espoused by Gandhi & Martin Luther King.

Malcolm Robinson, Social Worker & Catherine Sanders, Psychologist are Directors of Bower Place. They continue to incorporate new ideas into their extensive clinical practice experience, to provide a rich & innovative training experience.
